Communication and Multimedia Management

Profile

Marketing, multimedia and business administration are at the core of our Communication and Multimedia Management bachelor's programme and are interconnected in a practical way.

Our study programme offers interdisciplinary studies in business administration communication management with a focus on communication planning, execution and control as well as on digital media.

Graduates are prepared to assume responsible management roles in business-oriented communication professions.

Students learn new and expand existing key skills. The study programme is structured in modules: basic modules cover fundamentals of the communication and media industry, corporate management, law and management techniques. The following modules include business English, communication and multimedia management, e-business and design management.

The following specialisation modules are offered in the third and fifth semester:

- Online Marketing
- Digital Storytelling
- PR and Social Media Relations
- Web and App Conception
- Business Plans for Start-Ups
- Marketing Analytics
- Trade Fair Management

Students can choose three out of four modules for their specialisations.

In the sixth semester students realise a project followed by an academic thesis (bachelor's thesis) and a colloquium.

Career Options

Graduates are all-rounders and have very good career prospects as young leaders in marketing – across all sectors.

Possible occupations and fields are:

- Marketing and communication departments in companies of different industries
- Media, communication and advertising agencies
- Media companies & advertising marketing
- Freelancing
- Etc.

Graduates can take on tasks of company-specific conception and design of digital communication tools such as websites, podcasts and social media.

They are prepared for management tasks in agencies, production and consulting companies and other service providers in the media and communication industry.
